my journey into my american past

"Are you coming to my class?" asked another. These were the wide-eyed excited comments of students at Harriet Beecher Stowe (HBS) Elementary as I carried a lobster trap, a bucket full of bait.

teaching about our coastal ecosystem starts early

David Lester, with Marcus Rediker and Paul Buhle | Beacon Press $22 | 120 pages

Abolitionists Harriet Beecher Stowe, Frederick Douglass and Harriet Tubman are familiar to anyone when learning about American history. But the students at HBS are being introduced to their stories using graphic novels. In Harriet Beecher Stowe's incredible short story, the tale's narrator recounts for an audience of curious boys the story of the legendary Captain Kidd and his haunted clash of Captain's gains.
